Charity of Temper.

A

SERMON

Preach'd at.

St. Nicholas's Church

IN

GREAT TARMOUTH,

November the 5th. 1731.

By THOMAS MACRO, D. D. K. Minister of YARMOUTH.

Publish'd at the Request of the Corporation.

LONDON: $

Printed for WILLIAM PARKER, at the King's Head in St. Paul's Church-yard.

M,DCC,XXXII.

K

ion de (e t

To the Right Worshipful

The MAYOR,

The Worshipful

The JUSTICES,

The ALDERMEN;

AND

COMMON-COUNCIL-MEN

OF

REAT TAR MOUTH.

GENTLEMEN,

HE Reason of prefixing Your Name to this Discourse is, because it wants, not because I think it deserves your Patronage. What Merit it has, your Approde it entirely your own; for your Requests Commands, and coming from You, are to meet with Obedience from Me.

A 3

DEDICATION.

I heartily wish the Event may answer my Design in preaching, your Opinion upon hearing, and your Desire to have, rather than hear it again.

The first Sermon is yours, at your own Request; and the second, which is added to complete the Subject, offers itself to you, at mine.

I have this to say for both, That the Principle there treated, where soever it prevails, will at once happily govern the Counsels and Determinations of publick Bodies, and the private Conduct of particular Persons.

I am, under a due Sense of your man, Favours,

Your much Oblig'd

Humble Servant,

ailu

togo Th ton

ins

andi Ien i becy

Yarmouth, Dec. 24. 1731.

THO. MACRO

1 Co R. xiii. 3.

though I bestow all my Goods to feed the Poor, and though I give my Body to be burned, and have not Charity, it profiteth me nothing.

HE Words are taken out of the comparative Part of that excellent and noble Description which the Apostle hath given us of Charity; the Perfection of all Virues, superior to all supernatural Gifts, in alure of which, the Faith of a Christian unacceptable, and Righteousness of Life together vain.

ar

to at inils,

ind

the

The Power of doing the greatest and most stonishing Miracles, the removing of Mountins; the most enlarg'd Abilities of Underanding, the speaking with the Tongues of sen and of Angels, and having the Gift of Probecy; the Perseverance and Integrity held A 4 fast even unto Death, parting with Life ra. ther than with Faith, the giving our own Body to be burned; the largest Profusion of Wealth, even to leaving onefelf destitute, giving all our Goods to feed the Poor; all these Things are here suppos'd possible to fubfift apart from a true Love of God, and of Man for his Sake, and where they ever did or do, they are of no Account in God's Sight, and will avail nothing towards the obtaining His Approbation and Favour: These, however excellent, and valuable Qualifications they might feem, if strictly enquir'd into, were very defective, and imperfect; lighter than nothing and Vanity itself, if put into the Balance against true and real Charity, to which the Apostle attributes the Sum and Substance, the Life and Essence of Religion.

Ambition and Obstinacy, Bigotry and Superstition have carried Men to great Length in renouncing Property, and even sacrificing Life; but 'tis Love or Benignity of Mind that makes the Act virtuous and rewardable in the Doer, and the want of This alone is enough to vitiate our very Alms, and eclipse the Glory of Martyrdom itself.

Though I bestow all my Goods to feed the Poor, and though I give my Body to be burned, and have not Charity, it prositeth me not thing.

In farther treating this Subject I shall consider,

Firft,

ati

ity

vhi

ure hat

ent

uir

Care

rin vith

he ood is I

icts

eive

oifo

eco

ello

First, The Nature and Obligation, the Extent, and Excellency of Charity.

Secondly, I shall enquire (and the present Occasion calls for such an Enquiry) how the Church of Rome hath receiv'd this Direction of the Apostle, and practis'd this great Duty; whether she hath earnessly coveted this best Gift, and walked in this most excellent Way.

First, Let us view the Nature and Obliation, the Extent and Excellency of Chaity.

20 d le . 15

e

be

1

10-all

f,

The Notices and Judgment of Things, which Man, confider'd as a rational Creaure, is, by the Strength and Direction of hat Reason, able to form, will thus far eviently convince every fair and impartial Enuirer, that mutual Benevolence, and a kind are and Concern for the Species, is the rimary Law of human Nature, and that, vithout which Society falls into Confusion, he Order of Things is inverted, and the ood Man, who out of the good Treasure of is Heart might bring forth good Things, cts of Kindness and Forbearance, delightal to the Giver, and beneficial to the Reeiver, thus corrupted by Ill-nature, and oison'd with the Defire of doing Mischief, ecomes worse than a Beast of Prey to his ellow-Creatures, fuperior in Cunning and WatchWatchfulness of every Occasion to do Evil, tho' not equal in Strength to the Lion that goeth about seeking whom he may devour.

Thus far natural Light instructs how rational a Thing it is in itself, and how acceptable to the Reflection of a Man's own Mind, to be ever exercis'd in the Perfor. mance of humane and good-natur'd Acts and wifely choosing the Character of Friend rather than Enemy to Mankind. Can a Man bate his own Flesh? is a Question that carries its own Answer in the strongest and most pathetick Negative; And the Affirmative would furely be the greatest Absurdity, the most false and malicious Representation of human Nature: Can a Man then hate his Brother, who is in all things like unto Himfelf? Can he injure the Community of which he is a Member, and not hurt Him felf, or propose Self-Escape and Safety when the Destruction is general?

This is a short Sketch of the Nature and Obligation of this Duty, as it depends upon the Information of Reason. Man is, by the Inclination and Opinion of his own Mind, by the Good of Society, and his own particular Interest, which is inseparable from that of the Whole, and prospers or decline as the general Good does, and by Self-Insufficiency to attain Happiness, determined to have kind and charitable Thoughts of others, and to carry those Thoughts into ot

Actions

te

rd

ne

d

au

nv

rtı

for

to

T

di

tl

ll'd

vin

ies

ake rdi

esp

g I

her rity

egr

ct

her

R

atu

a

up

itur

tion; to pity and set right every mistaken other, to affist every indigent one, and fead of giving a bad Word, or doing a rd Thing, to confult and endeavour their nefit in all possible Manner that is loving d courteous. There is both Reason and auty sufficient in this Representation to nvince and attract every unprejudiced Perto the Admiration and Practice of this rtue; but as the Apostle hath stated and forced it, the Description cannot be more vil

that ır.

OW ac-WI

forcts,

end 1an

carnoft

ive

the of

hi

m-

of

mnen

ind

00 he nd,

21m

16

11-

'nd

of

to

t or more elegant.

The Term Charity in the Text, is condiffinguish'd to what is commonly, and the restrain'd Acceptation of the Word, I'd Charity. As by that is meant Almfving, or a feafonable Relief of the Necesies of the Hungry, or Thirsty, or Sick, or aked, so by this is to be understood a rdial and effectual Love of Mankind, a espect for every one as a Brother, follow-Peace with all Men, bearing with each her in Gentleness, and forgiving in Sinrity and Chearfulness; measuring the same egree of Liberty to others, which we exat ourselves in return, doing as we defire hers should do to us, depriving no Man Right to think, or act, as the Condition, ature, or Ability of Understanding require; a Word, avoiding every thing that breaks upon this Temper, whether it be an illtur'd Censure, an unjust Denial, Clamour, ou

11 at nly

it

101 eni

If

ifc

m e i

ot t ula

be

pin

ter

oul

rtu

fer

ay

ara Itru

me

ver

W

id p

it

en :

or Wrath, or ill Treatment, and expressing the most compassionate Feeling for human Errors, and extensive Benevolence to the Species, reserving to every one, from a Will influenc'd by a just Sense of Things, the true Principle of Duty, all Property strik and inviolable.

This is the Charity that suffereth long, and is kind, that envieth not, nor is puffed up, that doth not behave itself unseemly, is not easily provoked, thinketh no Evil, rejoiceth not in Iniquity, but rejoiceth in the Truth, beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endured all things, and that which shall never fail.

There is one Branch of this most excelent Grace, to which the Apostle (by the Phrase of the Text, expressing great and servent Zeal for the Faith) may seem to have an especial View; this is Charity with regard to the Opinions our Brother may have entertain'd in Matters of Faith or Duty, or Points of Religious Dispute.

We are not more warm in the Pursuit of Honour, or Riches, or Pleasure, than we are in the Maintenance of any thing we apprehend to be Religious, and as such, too facred to be violated; in this good Cause, to be zealously affected is a Point of Reputation, as well as Duty.

But the Hatred, and Violence, and Wrath of Man will neither work the Righteousness, nor advance the Honour of Gop.

A rational Creature is in Duty so strictly ound, according to his Capacity, to prove Il things, and to hold fast that which is good, nat, to enjoin the Precept, and disallow the proper Means of rationally complying with it, is an Absurdity not to be born, but y that Charity which beareth all things, and poiceth not in such Iniquity, and Misappre-ension of Things,

ad at the

he he

nd

to ve

10

of

ve

WC

00 ſc,

12

ath

If a Brother has applied himself to the iscovery of Truth in all due manner as beme him; if neither the Pride of Life, nor e Lusts of the Flesh have hinder'd his Eyes om looking strait forward; if he defires bt to be thought wife by Affectation of Sinlarity, nor has any fecret Vice necessary be screen'd, to engage his maintaining an pinion he knows to be wrong; and, if ter all this Diligence and Impartiality, he ould miss Truth, would it not be his Misrtune rather than his Fault? Would he ferve to be beaten with any Stripes? Or ay he not put in a full Claim to all Forarance and Pity, to all tender and mild struction, the most Christian, and at the me Time most effectual Method of Revery?

Where this is the Case, Error is pitiable of pardonable, I had almost said, innocent, it would be, if it were (which is hard ten for a Man's self to determine in all the

fro

Sci

be

Me

hi

eft

or

1 et hr

mai Paf

Act

xa

Chr

ron

1 ņuc

ver

ut

on

nd

T

owa

wha

not men of in oun ng c

the Circumstances of his Search) strictly in voluntary.

Truth deserves our best Affection, and a utmost Care, and if, in spite of these, we err, and fix in a wrong Judgment, we say not find the Disappointment fatal, nor just incurr Censure and Punishment.

In every Case of a truly consciention. Non-compliance with any establish'd be ctrine, or Way of Worship, let Charity in tercede, to have it savour'd with a Toleration; that the sincerely Erroneous may be attack'd and reduc'd by the Art of Persus since it is and the Power of Reason not violate and harden'd by the Force of unmerciful as cruel Treatment. And yet, Even in the Judgment of Charity itel (take it in its full Extent and Latitude) in Manner of declining Truth, or maintaining Error may be fuch, (for Instance, when it treated with Rudeness and Drollery) as to fall under the Cognisance of the Civil Power and justly merit a severe Animadversus from the Magistrate as the Guardian of the Honour of God, his Principal, and the publick Good of the People, who can never be long either safe or happy, without the Instruction of Religion and moral Virtue of their Conduct. It then degenerates, from Misapprehension and Desect of Understanding, into Perverseness of Will and Affection ing, into Perverseness of Will and Affection from an ingenuous Search of Truth, into Scorn and Hatred of it, which are Works of be Flesh, and may be restrain'd by such Methods as are not fitted to produce Conriction and fincere Profession.

But how far the Civil Magistrate may hink reasonable or proper to interpose, is eft to his own Sentiments, who is to answer or the Trust lodged in him.

ha die

finance and fell the control of the wer

fio

th

eve

th

ron

and

ion ron

Let us put the Case in the strongest Terms, et us suppose Men to be (as many are) hro' real Scruple of Conscience, or (as many other) thro' Neglect, Prejudice, or Passion, in a wrong Way of Thinking or Acting in their religious Capacity; and then xamine what are the Directions which Christianity affords us, to convert a Sinner from the Error of his Way.

There is a Precedent in this Kind of too much Authority to be oppos'd, and what very one, who not only calleth Him Lord, ut doth as He saith, will think his Duty to conform to, as 'tis undoubtedly his Scandal nd his Crime to depart from.

The Merciful and Holy Jesus behaved oward the Samaritans far differently to what those both give and receive from one nother, who, under the folemn Engagement and Profession of Brethren, and Hope of inheriting the same Promises, are too often ound beating, and wounding, and devourng each other.

The

The Refusal of the Samaritans to furnish Him and his Disciples with the ordinary Conveniences and Refreshments of Life, for no other Reason, but because his Face was as though he would go to ferusalem, (the Place whither all the then Worshippers of the true God were bound to repair) was an Affront and Indignity, which the Author of the Gospel of Peace would not resent in so severe and terrible a Manner, as that of calling down Fire from Heaven.

The Samaritans were undoubtedly wrong and superstitious, and even idolatrous (as the learned Mr. Mede thinks) in their Manner of Worship, and treated that very Person most unworthily, who came to enlighten an ignorant World, and explain to Men what God was, and what was the true, spritual Worship which He requires, and will accept at our Hands: Yet, neither could this their indecent Usage of Him and them, nor Zeal for his own excellent Design, carry him out of Character, to destroy Mens Lives, when the gracious Purpose of his Mission was to save them,

Two of his Disciples, the Sons of Thunder, were immediately for calling down Lightning to consume the inhospitable Village and is Inhabitants: They were probably not far from the Place where * Elijah had twice fie

0 bu

ma

co

M

Di

wh

pag

 Γ h

uff

0 ud

n] Glo

We

udg

bear

parc

rear

ot L

pe

ind

1

^{* 2} Kings i. 10, 11, 12.

brought down Fire from Heaven on King Abaziah's Captains, and their Fifties, and this might enflame them with a Desire to make it again remarkable for Judgment and fery Indignation.

ur.

di

fc

ace

he

of 725

or

in

of

n-

1-

en

en

i-

ill

d

n, y

5, n(

1,

ES

But He who was Meekness itself, on this Occasion, and at such their Suggestion, rebuk'd them in Severity, * Ye know not what nanner of Spirit ye are of: Ye do not rightly confider, or resolve upon the Matter, in a Manner fuitable to the mild and affectionate Disposition of the Gospel of Peace and Love, which I came to declare, and ye are to propagate and diffuse throughout the Earth. This Dispensation of mine is intended for Season of Goodness and Mercy, Longuffering and Forbearance; there is a Time o come, when Sinners shall be ripe for udgment: Now the Son of Man came not n Power, but in Humiliation, not in the Glory of the Father, but in the Frailty and Weakness of the human Nature, not to udge, but to fave: Hereafter He shall appear as mighty to punish, as He is now to pardon, coming in flaming Fire, to take Veneance on them who know not God, and have ot believed and obeyed the Truth.

This fingle Instance, so apposite to this pecies of Charity, deserves the Attention, and requires the Obedience of every Church, ^{*} Luke ix. 55.

vit

01

el he h ue

V

ay er

in d

C

rl

is lig

rk

v.

bi

ft

(

igh

St.

der

er

*

and every Christian, and may fully satisfy us, how wrong and cruel our great Master thought it, to attempt the converting, or reducing Men from Error to the Acknowledgment of the Truth, by any other than spiritual Weapons, the Arguments and rational Evidence of Gentleness and Persuafion, Admonition and Reproof, setting Truth and Error before them as Moses did List and Death, Blessing and Cursing before the Israelites, and then leaving it to the free Determination of the Mind, under a full Apprehension of the Difference, to choose the Good, and refuse the Evil.

In this Way and Method, our dear Lord, acting in the Capacity of a Prophet or Teacher come from God, began to make Profelytes, and gain Men over to his Religion: He offer'd no kind of Force or Violence to compel them, but propos'd it to their Confideration or Choice, inviting them to come unto Him, and follow Him, with full Purpose of Heart and Assurance of the Truth.

As He offer'd no worldly Advantage to tempt and entice them, (for that had been directly opposite to the Nature of his Kingdom, which is spiritual and not of this World) so He used no kind of outward Terror, or Torture to awe them into a Compliance: All such Ways were contrary to the Nature of Man, to the Nature of all Religion, and especially his own, which suits its Argu-

isfy

ter

01

W-nan

ra-

ua-

uth

ife

free

full

ose

ord,

ber

tes,

He

mide-

ento

e of

to

een

ing-

rld)

, or

ice:

ture

and gu-

enu

nents to the Minds and Consciences of Men, with a pure Design to make them sincere converts, not formal Hypocrites; and His eligion in Substance and Design is still the same, and must ever continue so, in our houghts, and in our Practice, to make us the Disciples and Followers of Him, such as se will own and reward in the last Day.

Whatever Wood, Hay, or Stubble Men ay lay upon the old Foundation, whater wrong and unworthy Notions may, by man Device, be blended into Religion, d taken for a Part of it, these cannot prowhen that which is greater than Faith d Hope is excluded, and hath no Share in System given of it. The Religion from we is pure and peaceable; the Gradation Christian Virtues is consummated in brorly Kindness and Charity. * He that saith, is in the Light, or understandeth what ligion is, and hateth his Brother, is in rkness, and deceiveth himself, even until v. True Piety and Charity are inseparable, shteoujness and Mercy, Truth and Peace It dwell together, to fulfil the whole of Christian Law, of loving God and our ighbour.

St. Paul was a warm and impetuous Zealot ler the Rigor of the Law, but from being ersecutor and injurious, by the Spirit of the Gospel was soften'd and form'd into Mile ness and Candour: Then he became the greatest Advocate and the fairest Pattern Zeal and Charity duely temper'd, fanctifying and quickening each other; and this Ha mony of Affection for Truth and for Meni fo indispensably necessary, that (in the Judg ment of Him, who had the Spirit of God) our Pretensions to Zeal, how powerful foer it might appear in every Act of Self-deni and Suffering, are declar'd and will be foun to profit us nothing, if we have not Charit Our earnest Contention for the Faith in then only terminate in the Glory of Go and redound to our Benefit, when 'tis accom panied with Good-will towards Men.

^{* 1} John ii. 9.

[20]

ic

V

er

XC

he

Con feu

hey

br

f F

p p

ice

fel

heir

vhat eing

acte

ng,

one.

Re

I proceed now,

Secondly, To enquire (the proper Subja of this Day's Enquiry) how the Church Rome hath receiv'd this Doctrine of our An ftle, and practis'd this great Duty; wheth The hath earnestly coveted this best Gift, a walk'd in this most excellent Way.

'Tis fuppos'd that a Man may voluntar give his Body to be burned, and yet not he Charity in the Design of so doing; and certain they can have none, who violen force others, contrary to their firm Perli fion, either to renounce the Truth, or dure the Flames: But, where it has preval rear and operated in Conjunction with Truth which

ild

n of

la:

ide | 1

enia

oun

rit Cha

01

OD

bjd

Apo

20 ari

ha

lend

rfu

Val

1 2 [11]

Innocence and the Grace of God, the Crulty of the Tormentor has been outdone by he Charity of the Martyr, forgiving and raying for him. 'Tis the Efficacy and unelenting Virtue of it, that makes it so excelent and valuable: But I am now to conider the State of them that have it not, r have not exercis'd it in Matters of reliious Difference; where the Neglect or Want of it, or acting in direct Opposition o it, must fall heavy to accuse and conemn their Conduct, in Proportion to the xcellent Nature, and necessary Obligation of he Duty.

They, the Rulers at least of the Romish Communion, have acted so much like the sews, in conspiring against Protestants, as hey did against Paul to slay him when a Christian, fancied it to be so essential a Point of Religion to extirpate Hereticks, in order to promote the Glory of God, and the Serice of Mother Church, that we may more stelly trust this Point to be determined by heir own Historians, and sit easy under what they relate, than run the Risque of eing tax'd with Uncharitableness (the Chaacter forbidden by the Text) in representing, tho' truly and fairly, what has been one.

Religion has receiv'd much the same reatment from the Members of that Church, which Mankind hath done from a Person B 3 who who * wanted neither Cunning nor Abilities nothing but Good-nature and Charity.

He pictur'd Mankind as false and cruel, void of Confidence, and full of Jealous, naturally and mutually desiring each other's Destruction, and lying in wait in secret Places feeking whom they might devour.

The Church of Rome has much in the same Manner misrepresented Christian R. ligion; fo that upon a View of the Tyranm which it exercises over the Souls and Bodies of Men, and its rigid Demands to divest our selves of Humanity, to do God Service, and become true Sons of the Church, it may, without Breach of Charity, be ask'd, Is this the Gospel of Peace? Can Christianity beat to be propagated and maintain'd at the Expence of Charity and Compassion, the very Essence and Perfection of it? Is this pure and undefiled Religion, which has been to deeply imbrued in the Blood of the Innocent? Is it not rather a Religion that sends a Sword on Earth, whence Wars and Fightings come as naturally, as from the Lusts of Ambition and Avarice?

The Precepts of the Gospel run all one Way, to make us tender of the Lives and Interests of Men, to try all mild and endearing Methods with the Sinful and Erroneous, to exert our best Endeavours with

1

ec

W

L

ar

N

by

of

ev

of an

V

W

Al

to

me

me

W

Wi

by

 $\hat{D}e$

fin

in

Mr. Hobbes.

ties

uel, ufy,

er's

aces

the

Re-

nny dies

urand

lay,

this eat

Ex-

ery ure

10

no-

ht.

of

one ind

en-

10-ith

ity

Charity and Meekness of Wisdom, and to put up our Prayers to the God of Love for their Conversion and Establishment in the Truth.

This pure Doctrine was not at first planted by Force and Violence, nor can it ever want to be so desended; by its own native Lustre and Beauty it pervaded all Regions, and captivated the Hearts of Men of all Nations under Heaven, and will still prevail by the kind and condescending Deportment of its Professors and Well-wishers; and whatever Notes and Characters have been given of a true Church, the Want of Charity is an infallible Sign, that 'tis not sound in its Vitals.

Nothing can be fairly alledg'd from holy Writ to justify or extenuate the Guilt and Abomination of a perfecuting Spirit.

The Phrase in the Parable, * Compel them to come in, can by no just Rule of Construction mean any thing more than Dint of Argument and Importunity of Address, unless we would set the Doctrine of Christ at variance with his Practice.

The Discipline of a Church is warranted by divine Precept, to be exercised § for the Destruction of the Flesh, (i. e.) to reform the sinful Lusts of it, that the Spirit may be saved in the Day of the Lord; but not to the taking away of natural Life, which is to fend Men down quick into Hell, instead of instructing them in Meekness that oppose themselves*, and waiting God's own Time, if peradventure He will give them Grace to the acknowledging of the Truth.

^{*} Luke xiv. 23. § 1 Cor. v. 5.

The Expulsion and utter Excision of the idolatrous Nations by Israel, the People of God, had been outragiously unjust, and betray'd the utmost Cruelty of Persecution, had they not receiv'd an express Commission from the God of Heaven for so doing; had they not been made (which was the Truth of the Case) Instruments in God's Hands, to execute His just Wrath and Vengeance upon them, who knew, and who only could foreknow them to be incorrigible, by all the Methods of Lenity and Forbearance.

No Man, no Church hath this Knowledge, or Right to judge others, and devote them as Vessels fitted to Destruction.

They then who have this bitter Zeal and Cruelty of Heart and Hand, however they may boast, will be found Liars against the Truth; This Wisdom descendeth not from above, but ('tis the Charity of an Apostle) is earthly, fensual, devilish: 'Tis (as a & Great and Good Man hath compar'd it) like the Fire of Hell, all Heat and no Light,

e

R

n

ly

V

to u

(2

gi

18

to ve

H

re: th

un

fal

^{* 2} Tim. ii. 25. S Archbp. Tillotson.

A Religion without Good-nature is worse than no Religion at all, is mere Popery: And shall we not rather be honest Heathens, and preserve our Humanity? But,

ng

10

of

ad

m

10 nc

e-

10 as

nd

ne,

d

11,

A

I must recall the Affertion of the Text, not only into Memory, but carry it also into Practice; for tho' the Matter of our double Deliverance on this Day, one from fecret Villainy, the other from open Invasion upon every thing dear, both Religious and Civil, demands the Zeal of a Protestant, and the Resentment of an Englishman, yet if I have not Charity, I am nothing, my Religion is We have departed from Rome, merely to preserve the Simplicity and Purity of Christian Doctrine and Worship, the most valuable Bleffing we do, or can enjoy; and to the Honour of the Protestant Cause, under all the Provocation we have receiv'd, (as great as Cruelty could tempt them to give, or Christianity dispose us to bear) such is our Regard to the Judgment of Charity, that we allow to them (what they peremptorily deny us) a Possibility of Salvation.

But the Duty more fuitable to our Deliverance, and a Sacrifice more acceptable to Him, by whose stretch'd-out Arm we were rescued, is, the Return of a joyful Heart, and thankful Lips, and virtuous Life.

Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy Name be the Praise, for thy Truth's sake, and because Thou hadst a Favour unto us. Continue, O God, thy Loving-kindness to us. Preserve the King from all secret Evil and open Violence; Give him the Hearts of all his People, and bow down before him the Necks of his Enemies; let them be cloathed with Shame and Confusion; but upon Himself and his Royal Posterity let the Crown for ever flourish. Amen.

[26]

